Meet Brea

Storytelling with Purpose

Brea M. Browner is a SAG Eligible actress, author, communications strategist, and media personality whose work bridges entertainment, culture, and meaningful conversation.

With professional experience in television and film, formal training in strategic communications, and a growing digital platform, she pairs the creative instincts of a performer with a communications professional's strategic perspective.

Her work explores identity, womanhood, healing, culture, and relationships. Through performance and candid conversation, Brea invites audiences to reflect on the experiences that shape who they become.

Press + Cultural Presence

From the Screen to the Conversation

Breya's cultural presence reflects an interest in Black storytelling, creative expression, and the conversations that keep film meaningful long after the credits.

ABFF Classic Cinema Series

Brown Sugar

Talkback Featuring Taye Diggs

Breya attended the screening and intimate talkback exploring hip hop, Black love, the making of the film, and its enduring cultural legacy more than two decades after release.

The experience reflects her interest in entertainment journalism and thoughtful cultural commentary on the stories behind the screen.

Blex Media

A Love Jones Experience

Beyond the Screen

Blex Media invited Breya to perform original poetry at an immersive celebration of Black love, creativity, and the film's cultural influence. Her piece will appear in her forthcoming book, I Am NOT Who You Think I Am.

Alongside fellow poets and creatives, she joined an evening of reflection on the film's themes, relationships, and continued relevance.

The Next Conversation
